Double Corn Yield By Soil Management

Illinois Tests Prove Value of New Methods

Farmers can double the present 50-bushel-per-acre state average corn yields through good soil management, declares Prof. A. L. Lang, University of Illinois.

Corn yields above 100 bushels per acre are repeatedly harvested by research workers from high fertility plots at the experiment stations. At Illinois, Lang points out, the high fertility plots have averaged above 100 bushels since the use of hybrid seed.

The No. 1 problem in getting these high yields is rebuilding of the organic matter supply of the soils. Years of "soil mining" have run down this supply, even on the rich black soil of the state. In addition, the soil supply of phosphorus and potash, vital to the growth of legumes, is badly depleted in most Corn Belt soils.

Lang outlines four steps toward rebuilding the soil:

1. Test your soil to determine the needs for lime and plant food.
2. Use of lime and fertilizers according to test to build the fertility level for the growth of legumes in the rotation.
3. Use of deep-rooted legumes, crop residues and manure to rebuild the organic matter supply. This organic matter will help aerate the soil and furnish the bulk of the nitrogen needed for crop rotation.
4. Supplementing the increased fertility of the soils with fertilizers carrying nitrogen, phosphorus and potash to permit the raising of 100-bushel corn crops.

Root Rot Resistant Oats Increase Yield

Because a disease called helminthosporium is affecting older varieties of oats in many grain states, farmers are turning to new introductions, such as Bonda and Mindo, which have proven resistant to this form of root rot.

In Minnesota the Minnesota Crop Improvement association is furnishing seed of these varieties to farmers who agree to retain only half of the crop for their own use, selling the balance to farmers who will agree to grow it for certification as pure seed. Those who have secured the seed of these two varieties report excellent yields and no crinkling down of the straw from disease.

Rhoda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Lawson, Alberi Lea, Minn., beside of a typical shock of Bonda oats on her father's farm. The yield last year was 86 bushels to the acre.

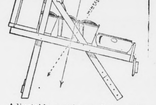
Utensil Sunning Rack



Adjustable sunning rack for milk utensils may be constructed to permit adjusting the angle of the slope so that the sun, summer or winter, will enter into the milk pails, cans or other utensils. The device shown was designed by Kansas board of agriculture.

Rules for Good Milk Insuring Top Profit

In order to make money with dairy cows not only must volume milk production be secured, but also it must be of good quality. To secure good milk, milk only clean, healthy cows and keep them in a well-ventilated barn. Use of only clean sterile utensils, prompt cooling of the milk and proper handling until it is used or delivered will assure good quality milk. Men handling cows also should be clean.

Prevent Cannibalism By Good Management

Keeping Chicks Active Is Real Secret of Success

By W. J. DRYDEN

Chicks will seldom be cannibalistic if provided with proper brooder and range space, correct temperature and air control and a balanced ration, properly fed. They must be kept alert and active. Only the mistreated, sluggish chick will turn to cannibalism.

While the chicks must be comfortable, the temperature should be reduced gradually.

Use a good starting mash. There is no substitute for the best for starting baby chicks. Give them all they will eat at all times and provide plenty of eating troughs. When the chicks are four to five weeks old they may be given grain, and made to scratch for it.

Baby chicks must be managed right to prevent cannibalism.

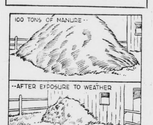
A good range and shelter should be provided. Pasture such as bluegrass, alfalfa or lespedeza will lower the feed cost and make the chickens take on economical gain. Swiss chard, kale, Chinese cabbage or rape may be planted and the leaves pulled and fed to the chicks. Alfalfa, clover or other grasses may be chopped and fed fresh, or alfalfa leaf meal utilized to aid in proper health and growth.

BUILD FERTILITY



Careless handling of manure causes serious losses of fertilizer and organic matter needed to help increase crop yields and rebuild soil structure.

One hundred tons of manure contains 25 tons of organic matter, 1,000 pounds of nitrogen, 200 pounds of phosphorus and 800 pounds of potash, one-half of it in the liquid part. Piled outside and exposed to rain and weather for several months, this 100 tons may shrink to 50 tons and lose half its fertility and organic matter. Losses may be reduced by using enough bedding to soak up all liquid manure, cleaning stalls frequently and hauling manure directly to fields as soon as possible.

Fear Tuberculosis Threatens Germany

100,000 Residents Are Suffering From Dread Malady.

BERLIN.—Gen. Joseph T. McNarney reported to the war department that more than 100,000 Germans in the American zone have tuberculosis and 35,000 of them cannot go to hospitals but must remain where they can spread their deadly infection among the rest of the population.

McNarney, as military governor of the American zone, said in his regular monthly report on the occupation that 113,661 Germans in the United States area were known to have tuberculosis. Because of a bad shortage in hospitals, he said, over 15 per cent cannot get the institutional care they need.

"A large number" of these are "active infectious" cases, he said, predicting a greater spread of communicable diseases unless hospital facilities were nearly doubled to meet American "essential" standards.

"This shortage of hospital facilities will result in large numbers of sick failing to receive treatment and will mean that many cases of communicable diseases, such as tuberculosis, typhoid fever and diphtheria, will be treated in the home or as ambulance patients with resultant exposure of other individuals and a greater spread especially under crowded living conditions," he said.

McNarney listed tuberculosis and diphtheria as the greatest communicable diseases in Germany.

At the same time McNarney criticized German health officials for their "failure to take positive effective action to forestall health hazards that are preventable and press such action to completion."

69 War Plants Sold in Chicago Area Changed to Peace Work

CHICAGO — Eighty - nine war plants in the Chicago region of War Assets administration have been sold as surplus and reconverted to peacetime production, S. G. Backman, zone administrator, disclosed.

"These plants have been transformed into an integral part of our peacetime productive economy," he pointed out.

Sale of the 89 plants brought $104,658,000 into federal coffers. In their present production stage their employees number 42,900, with an estimated annual wage of $128,700,000.

The Chicago region includes, approximately, the northern two-thirds of Illinois, the northern half of Indiana and the southern two-thirds of Wisconsin.

Backman said that in all of the six regions composing the Chicago zone, including the Chicago region, more than 195,000 persons are now at work at an estimated annual payroll of 566 million dollars in 275 reconverted plants.
